

FOREWORD

It is my privilege to introduce the third edition of “Indian Journal of Projects, Infrastructure and Energy Laws “. This is a unique publication as it covers technical and legal issues of infrastructure projects. The articles have been contributed by eminent persons from the legal and other professions. I was happy to note that find that students have been invited to present their views.

With the world looking towards accelerating the growth of the economy, the sectors covered in this journal have been continuously attracting huge investments all over the world. In view of this, IJPIEL should find an exceptional place in its field.

This edition shall be no exception in providing its readers with informative and well-researched articles and case comments which may help students as well as various professionals in attaining the knowledge and developing a perspective in different areas.

Finally, I would like to thank the editorial team responsible for publication of this journal, including authors, researchers, and advisors.

I am sure IJPIEL would continue to promote the various aspects of infrastructure development by publishing informative and knowledgeable material for its readers.
